

Questions on A narrow Fellow in the Grass by Emily Dickinson:

1. How does the structure of the poem itself re-create for the reader the growing uncertainty and the element of surprise experienced by the speaker?
2. What leaves the speaker frightened at the end of the poem? Is it fear of harm or fear of uncertainty?
3. Is it significant that the speaker never actually uses the word “snake”?